The building that you'll climb is built with
All the trappings of a home
A parlor, kitchenette, and stair
For those who tend the overgrown

Its name is twinned with one below it
Laying lower on the hill
The second, secret name is better
Flora whispers, fauna trills

The view was sweet but now demolished
Steel and stone turned into sand
While farther cliffs melt sun like butter
Yellow, pooling in their hand

So go to where the bird's eye lingers
The place that seekers built to rise
The namesake of our fictive council
Is where you'll find the Winthrop prize
